After Listening: 10 Minute Discussion

Moving to a new country can be tough. In the second news story, we found about the charity Home Girls Unite, who help the oldest sisters in new families. Have you ever moved to a new country or even a new town? If you have, how was it for you? If you haven't, use your imagination. What can be tough about moving to a new town or city? Are there any things you think could be easier? What advice would you give to somebody moving to a new country or town?

After Listening: The Big Debate

The National Trust looks after old buildings that have some dark history. The people who owned the buildings a long time ago were slave owners. This is not a subject that is taught in schools in the UK. Pick if you are for or against the following statement and argue for your perspective. People should be taught about the darker side of their country's history. Are there any negatives to learning about the darker sides of history? Are there any positives? Do you think it is better for people to focus on history or should we focus on the future instead? Discuss with a classmate and make sure you give plenty of examples to support your argument.

After Listening: Writing

Is it a good or a bad idea to learn about the darker sides of your country's history? You may have just debated this topic with you classmates orally but now it is time to write down your thoughts in a newspaper article. You have been asked by your local newspaper to write a debate article on this topic. Do you think people should be taught about the bad things that their country did in the past or should they focus on just the positives instead? Pick an argument and write an article about it. You should make sure you include your position (for or against) in the introduction of your text. For every argument you include, make sure you give examples and explain them in a persuasive way so that the readers are convinced!
