After Listening: 10 Minute Discussion

In the second news story, we heard about a zero-waste app called Olio in the UK. The idea is that the app can help people reduce their waste. How does the app work? Do you think it is something you could use? Could you imagine picking up food from your neighbours? The goal of the app was to create a possibility for a zero-waste lifestyle. Do you think it is important to reduce the amount of waste you produce? Why or why not? How often do you recycle? Do you think it is easy to recycle? Could you live a zero-waste lifestyle? How much waste do you think you produce every day? How about your family? Give examples!

After Listening: The Big Debate

The results of the survey said that the average European household recycles 50% of their waste. What do you think is the best way to improve this number? Should the governments of the European countries create new rules and regulations about recycling? Or do you think it should be the responsibility of individual citizens? Pick a side and debate! Try to convince your classmates of your opinion!
