After Listening: Plan an Election Party!

In the USA, lots of people celebrated that Biden won the election. Now it is your turn to celebrate. Work together with a classmate and plan an election party! You need to agree on a date, time and place, but also on who you are going to invite. Is there going to be some sort of theme (maybe a USA-theme?) Do you want people to come in costumes? What kind of decorations do you need to buy for your party? What food would you like to serve? What kind of drinks would you like to serve? Will you have any activities or party games? Which ones? How about music? Live music, a DJ or a playlist? Give examples of some good songs you could play!

After Listening: Writing

After hearing about the election in the United States, you remember that your cousin, Jimmy, lives in North Carolina! Write an email to him asking what it is like there. You know he is 18, and that he can vote – ask him how he feels about the result.

Don't forget to start your email with a friendly opening phrase, and ask how Jimmy and his family are doing. You haven't spoken to him since before the summer holidays, so you should also include some information with you here in Sweden. Update Jimmy on the latest things that are happening in your life.
