Do you choose the music you listen to depending on your mood? Patricia Masel does.

PATRICIA MASEL:

My name is Patricia Masel, I'm 11. I live in St Kilda with my mum. And my favourite song is For the First Time with The Script.

It's an Irish band and I went to their concert with my mum in April and it was fun. Well, there's five guys in the band. The lead singer is called Danny and then there's a piano player, two guitarists and two drummers and the lead singer he also plays guitar.

They normally play slow things but it's not too slow it's just, yes alternative. He's singing about he's meeting his girlfriend for the first time and that's why it's called For the First Time. I just like the lyrics and I like how they put it together and I like, yes I like the lyrics.

When I feel a bit sad I normally do listen to music and that type of music. It's probably techno and pop and yes. You might just feel sad so you might feel like listening to a jumpy song that's kind of catchy and then some days you just feel like listening to some old stuff. I think it depends on your mood.

When I grow I probably will, there will be new songs coming out. And so I might like them as well. So like I might alter it, as in my favourite songs. But yes, I've got lots.

Music is really important to me because I just like listening to it when I've got different things going on in my life. And it just, it makes me feel good about everything even if something really bad happens. So yes, it's really important.
