av Kate Holland

Hi, I'm Kate Holland, and this is Newsreel Easy.

- Today, tackling sexism and harassment in the UK.
Katrina: This treatment is normalised, and I think it starts from such an early age.
- And new music from Rihanna.

But first.

Tokyo Olympics 2021

Last year, the Olympic Games were supposed to take place in Tokyo. But because of the Coronavirus pandemic they are now going to be held this summer. However, many top athletes are worried about how lockdown has affected their physical and mental preparation.

This is American runner Allyson Felix, speaking on a BBC podcast.

Allyson Felix: I'm based in Los Angeles and there are very few facilities that are even open, currently right now we're training in the street.

Allyson is having to train in the streets to keep fit.

For some athletes, lockdown has had a negative impact on their mental health.

Hollie Arnold is a British Paralympic athlete, who has found training hard. This is Hollie speaking to BBC Sports.

Hollie Arnold: I can't do training. I feel like it's like a mental block right now. I don't have any energy, I don't have any oomph in me at all to try and do something.

Despite finding training hard, Hollie will be competing at the Paralympic Games in August this year.

Street Harassment

Street harassment of women and girls by men, has been a huge topic of discussion in the UK this month. This came after a young woman called Sarah Everard was killed while she was walking home. A man has been arrested, and charged with her murder.

An investigation by UN Women UK found that 97% of women aged 18-24 have been sexually harassed. This includes verbal as well as physical harassment.

This is 21-year-old Katrina from Suffolk. She told me that she has felt unsafe alone in public since she was very young.

Katrina: Walking to school and stuff, that's when I first noticed you know, the cars like beeping or people shouting stuff at you.

Katrina thinks there is a big problem with girls being taught that it is their responsibility to keep safe.

Katrina: At school, girls are taught that they need to cover up and that they are the distraction to the boys.

Katrina thinks that men and boys need to take responsibility for their actions.

Street harassment isn't illegal in the UK. But sisters Maya and Gemma Tutton started a movement called Our Streets Now, which aims to end Public Sexual Harassment in the UK by making it a criminal offence. This is Maya, speaking on BBC News.

Maya Tutton: We need to as a society, and our politicians need to be answering this problem with real solutions.

Rihanna Announces New Music

And finally, Rihanna has announced that she will be releasing new music. It will be the first time in five years that she's brought out any solo songs.

She made the announcement in a reply to a fan on social media. This is her singing Work, featuring Drake.

That's all for today. I'll be back on the 24th April. Goodbye for now!
