KATE: : Hi, I'm Kate Holland. Welcome to Newsreel Easy.

Coming up:

- Being your own boss.
Clip: I can decide what I do with my day.
- And Britney Spears on her new found freedom.
Clip: I'm just grateful, honestly, for each day.

But first

Dislikes on Youtube

YouTube has announced it is hiding the dislike counts from all of its videos.

They say that there have been problems with something called 'dislike bombing'. This is when a group of people give certain videos 'dislikes' to embarrass the creators or lower the videos' popularity.

Here's Matt Koval from YouTube explaining the decision – on YouTube:
MATT KOVAL: Apparently groups of viewers are targeting a video's dislike button to drive up the count. That's a big problem when half of YouTube's mission is to give everyone a voice.

KATE: So will you miss the thumbs down counts – or are you glad to see them go?

Young entrepreneurs

Now, have you ever thought about one day running your own business? Starting a new business and running it yourself is called being 'an entrepreneur'.

A recent report found that over half of 18-to 30-year-olds in the UK dream of setting up their own business. But, in reality, less than 10% actually do.

Tabby is 22 years-old. She runs an eco-friendly clothing company.

TABBY: People can come to me with the clothes in their wardrobe that they don't wear anymore and get them reworked. So a pair of trousers could be turned into a top and a skirt.

KATE: Tabby says her company can redesign old clothes to make them more fashionable.

KATE: So, what are the advantages of having your own business?

TABBY: I can decide what I do with my day. You have full creative control over things.

KATE: What are some of the disadvantages?

TABBY: At this early stage of my business, I'm not earning enough to make it support me. And so I have to take a part time job on top of this full time business, so probably working 13 hours a day.

FRED: I think it's a scary prospect because it just offers no financial stability.

KATE: That's Fred, who's 23. He's developing an idea to create special shoes which turn the energy in our footsteps into electricity.

FRED: It's to bypass the use of traditional fossil fuels, and to empower users to generate their own clean electricity.

KATE: And what tips would you give to people looking to become an entrepreneur?

FRED: Don't be scared when things go wrong: take stock, be flexible and try again.

Britney Spears

BRITNEY SPEARS: It's a really long time to be in a situation you don't want to be in.

KATE: That is US pop singer, Britney Spears, in a video she posted to her social platforms. She's just been freed from a legal contract which gave control of most aspects of her life to her dad. He said that she wasn't well enough to make decisions about her life.

But a group of fans campaigned for years to stop the arrangement.

BRITNEY SPEARS: So I'm just grateful, honestly, for each day. The Free Britney Movement... you guys rock ['Britney's body, Britney's choice!']

KATE: Thank you for listening and speak to you next time for our special end of year review, which will be out on the 11th of December! Goodbye!
